Although we will go over these rules with guests, please be aware of rules before your session.

1. DO NOT pick up, sit on, hit, be mean, poke, scare, or scream at the animals at any time.
2. DO NOT feed the animals.
3. No food or beverages allowed in the enclosed barnyard area.
4. DO NOT let your child put their hands in their mouth after petting an animal.
5. Keep your child’s/children’s hands and feet out of the mouths of the animals.
6. DO NOT climb any fence.
7. No barefoot or open toed shoes allowed inside the enclosed barnyard area.
8. Sanitize your hands before petting and immediately after petting. (See warning below)
9. If you get scratched or bit, from a surface or an animal, please notify us immediately.
10. Keep the gate closed after entering and upon leaving enclosed barnyard area so no animals escape.

These rules are in place for everyone’s safety. We take a no tolerance stance on them. If you do not cooperate, your session will end and you will be asked to leave.

WARNING

There are some diseases and parasites that can be spread from animals to humans. The risk of infection through petting farm animals may be prevented by following everyday good hand hygiene measures. Therefore, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) warns that children and adults should wash and/or sanitize their hands immediately after touching the animals at any petting zoo.

Heightened precautions should be applied to high-risk groups: Children under age five, people with weakened immune systems, and pregnant women fall in the category of high-risk for serious infection, and hence should strictly follow all the precautions enforced in the animal contact area. If you prefer to wear gloves or shoe covers, please ask for a pair.
